SAVE BABY SISTER

Judge Froat's Little Ida, After First Day at School, Falls Into Bonfire.

IS BURNED TO DEATH.

Jetta Hugged Her Tight to Put Out Flames and Herself, Probably, Will Die.

Ever since the subject was first discussed in her presence by her father, Judge Proat, of Cranford, N. J., and her mother, little Ida Froat, four years old, could think of nothing else but the fact that she was to be sent to the eindergarten in the Garson School. Vesterday morning, the day fixed for beginning her scholastic career, she was up ahead of every one else in the house and vapping at her mother; door to dress her.

At the breakfast table the child prattled of the wonderful things awaiting her at the school, and how she was going to grow up big and smart, like her ten-year-old sinter, Jetts. On the broad verands of the Front home, on Willow avenue, she kissed her mother goodby and gave her hand to her sister. Turning the corner, the little one paused and blew her mother another kiss.

That was the last time her little eyes saw her mother's face. To-day a little white coffin stands in the parlor of the home, and ida's burned and charred little body reats therein. In an adjoining room Jetta lies on a bed of pain, nurses hovering over and doctors despairing of their efforts to save her. Fell Into a Bonfire

New York Man Run Down by Train Shortly Before Hour Fixed for Marriage.

STAMFORD, Conn., April 27.-Standing beside Charles Hudson's cot in the Stamford Hospital yesterday Miss Alice Lynch of No. 607 East One Hundred and Thirty-fourth street, the Bronx, announced herself ready to become his bride at the hour set for the wedding. which was to have taken place in St. Jerome's Church in New York City.

Hudson, who is a railroad fireman living in No. 479 East One Hundred and Thirty-fourth street, fell off his engine Buesday night and fifteen freight cars passed over his legs, cutting them off below the knees. The man was hovering between life and death when his sweetheart reached the hospital, accompanied by his mother.

She fell on her knees beside his bed and her face was the first he saw when he regained consciousness. As the hour that had been fixed for the wedding drew near, the girl took his white and rembling hand in hers.

Nurses and doctors turned aside with tearful eyes at sight of the meeting of the sweethearts. The surgeons, after a consultation, decided Hudson's condition was too desperate for him to undergo the ceremony. His mother comforted Miss Lynch and told her the marriage will take place as soon as
